

RECOVERY COACHING WITHIN JUSTICE SETTINGS®

FRANKLIN, PA

We are excited to share this training designed for Recovery Coaches working within Justice Settings. People who have faced jail time, or incarceration, or any involvement within these settings have multiple barriers to overcome, so why not provide recovery coaches who can assist in navigating those barriers while providing support in their recovery journey. There is no better setting to serve as recovery coaches. Many of our coaches know these systems well. The best resources for navigating these systems are people who have used them. This is where our lived experiences will serve us, two-fold. Not only do we get to share what we know, we get to share who we are, in Recovery. Our goal is to prepare you for working within any of these settings.

PARTICIPANTS WHO COMPLETE THIS TRAINING WILL:

- Understand the different justice settings where recovery coaches can serve
- Learn about the barriers and resources that people involved within these settings can face
- Explore the ethical considerations of serving in these systems
- Explore how culture and stigma can affect people involved within this system and people affected by incarceration
- Know how to serve in the capacity of your expertise by staying in your lane
- Demonstrate how to utilize the skills of a recovery coach to support those within justice settings
